Novack and Macey Wins Every Penny Its Client Was Seeking; P. Andrew Fleming Serves as Lead Counsel

JULY 13TH, 2015

P. Andrew Fleming

Novack and Macey lead counsel P. Andrew Fleming won partial summary judgment for client, Apex Construction Company, a local construction contractor, in the Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois.

After the prime contractor of a public construction project failed to pay Apex for the work it had done, Novack and Macey filed a complaint on the contractor's behalf against both the prime contractor and the bonding company that issued the project bond required under Illinois law. The project bond is intended to ensure payment to all contractors who work on a public construction project.

Novack and Macey filed a motion for partial summary judgment, seeking recovery from the bonding company of the amounts owed under the project bond. Both the prime contractor and the bonding company opposed the motion. Nonetheless, the Court granted the motion and Novack and Macey won a judgment for every penny that its client was seeking. Thus, the Court entered judgment in favor of Apex in the full amount that it was seeking, plus prejudgment interest and attorneys' fees under the terms of the bond.
