MARCH 10TH, 2014

Shelby Drury

Novack and Macey LLP attorneys Shelby Drury and Elizabeth Wolicki were honored recently as “Volunteers of the Year” by the LAF Education Pro Bono Project for their ongoing representation of two students, third and fifth grade siblings, fighting to get special education services at a Chicago Public School.

The awards were presented at a reception hosted by DLA Piper. LAF honored more than 450 active volunteers who gave their time, energy and talent in 2013 to help LAF close 576 cases. There were 11 “Volunteer of the Year” awards for those, including Shelby and Elizabeth, who went “above and beyond” in helping LAF through pro bono projects.

Novack and Macey has partnered with LAF (formerly known as the Legal Assistance Foundation of Metropolitan Chicago) since 2012 to represent Cook County students whose families cannot afford a lawyer in school discipline and special education cases. The firm and LAF consider it vitally important to these students that they stay in school and get appropriate services to meet their needs.
